

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

CIHM/ICMH
Microfiche Series.

CIHM/ICMH
Collection de microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1984

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- | | |
|---|---|
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Cover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque | <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages detached/
Pages détachées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire) | <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Showthrough/
Transparence |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impression |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents | <input type="checkbox"/> Includes supplementary material/
Comprend du matériel supplémentaire |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/
La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distortion le long de la marge intérieure | <input type="checkbox"/> Only edition available/
Seule édition disponible |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/
Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées. | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/
Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure, etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure image possible. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Additional comments:
Commentaires supplémentaires: | |

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	12X	14X	16X	18X	20X	22X	24X	26X	28X	30X	32X
						✓

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

University of British Columbia Library

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

University of British Columbia Library

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

AN
ADDRESS

OF
Members of the House of Representatives,

OF THE
CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,

TO THEIR CONSTITUENTS,

ON THE SUBJECT OF THE WAR WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

PHILADELPHIA:

PRINTED AT THE OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES' GAZETTE.

1812.

154,279
HR
F5073-2
A3

The
A l capaci
themas sentati
of the tuents.
are ess
forms abridgm
present
the libe cessary
an appro
by syste
itself th ing spe
when s proporti
is the st
people r tices co
shortlive
Reflec
forced u
signed; r sentative
events of
They ha
ed as th under a question jority to any stag
of debate
cedented reasons
made to jority.
Princip
existence
not easil ever, on

ADDRESS.

The undersigned Members of the House of Representatives, to their respective Constituents.

A Republick has for its basis the capacity and right of the people to govern themselves. A main principle of a representative republick is the responsibility of the representatives to their constituents. Freedom and publicity of debate are essential to the preservation of such forms of government. Every arbitrary abridgment of the right of speech in representatives, is a direct infringement of the liberty of the people. Every unnecessary concealment of their proceedings is an approximation towards tyranny. When by systematick rules, a majority takes to itself the right, at its pleasure, of limiting speech, or denying it, altogether; when secret sessions multiply; and in proportion to the importance of questions, is the studious concealment of debate, a people may be assured, that such practices continuing, their freedom is but shortlived.

Reflections, such as these, have been forced upon the attention of the undersigned, members of the house of representatives of the United States, by the events of the present session of congress. They have witnessed a principle, adopted as the law of the house, by which, under a novel application of the previous question, a power is assumed by the majority to deny the privilege of speech, at any stage, and under any circumstances of debate. And recently, by an unprecedented assumption, the right to give reasons for an original motion, has been made to depend upon the will of the majority.

Principles more hostile than these to the existence of representative liberty, cannot easily be conceived. It is not, however, on these accounts, weighty as they are, that the undersigned have undertaken this address. A subject of higher and more immediate importance impels them to the present duty.

The momentous question of war, with Great Britain, is decided. On this topic, so vital to your interests, the right of publick debate, in the face of the world, and especially of their constituents, has been denied to your representatives. They have been called into secret session, on this most interesting of all your publick relations, although the circumstances of the time and of the nation, afforded no one reason for secrecy, unless it be found in the apprehension of the effect of publick debate, on publick opinion; or of publick opinion on the result of the vote.

Except the message of the president of the United States, which is now before the publick, nothing confidential was communicated. That message contained no fact, not previously known. No one reason for war was intimated, but such as was of a nature publick and notorious. The intention to wage war and invade Canada, had been long since openly avowed. The object of hostile menace had been ostentatiously announced. The inadequacy of both our army and navy, for successful invasion, and the insufficiency of the fortifications for the security of our seaboard were every where known. Yet the doors of congress were shut upon the people. They have been carefully kept in ignorance of the progress of measures, until the purposes of administration were consummated, and the fate of the country sealed. In a situation so extraordinary, the undersigned have deemed it their duty by no act of theirs to sanction a proceeding, so novel and arbitrary. On the contrary, they made every attempt, in their power, to attain publicity for their proceedings. All such attempts were vain. When this momentous subject was stated, as for debate; they demanded that the doors should be opened.

This being refused, they declined discussion; being perfectly convinced, from indications, too plain to be misunderstood that, in the house, all argument, with closed doors, was hopeless; and that any act, giving implied validity to so flagrant an abuse of power, would be little less than treachery to the essential rights of a free people. In the situation, to which the undersigned have thus been reduced, they are compelled, reluctantly to resort to this public declaration of such views of the state and relations of the country, as determined their judgment and vote upon the question of war. A measure of this kind has appeared to the undersigned to be more imperiously demanded by the circumstance of a message and manifesto being prepared and circulated at publick expense, in which the causes for war were enumerated, and the motives for it concentrated, in a manner suited to agitate and influence the publick mind. In executing this task it will be the study of the undersigned to reconcile the great duty they owe to the people, with that constitutional respect which is due to the administrators of publick concerns.

In commencing this view of our affairs, the undersigned would fail in duty to themselves did they refrain from recurring to the course, in relation to publick measures, which they adopted, and have undeviatingly pursued, from the commencement of this long and eventful session; in which they deliberately sacrificed every minor consideration to what they deemed the best interests of the country.

For a succession of years the undersigned have, from principle, disapproved a series of restrictions upon commerce, according to their estimation, inefficient as respected foreign nations and injurious, chiefly, to ourselves. Success, in the system, had become identified with the pride, the character, and the hope of our cabinet. As is natural with men, who have a great stake depending on the success of a favourite theory, pertinacity seemed to increase as its hopelessness became apparent. As the inefficiency of this system could not be admitted, by its advocates, without ensuring its abandonment, ill success was, carefully attributed to the influence of opposition.

To this cause the people were taught to charge its successive failures and not to its intrinsic imbecility. In this state of things the undersigned deemed it proper, to take away all apology for adherence to this oppressive system. They were desirous, at a period so critical in publick affairs, as far as was consistent with the independence of opinion, to contribute to the restoration of harmony in the publick councils, and concord among the people. And if any advantage could be thus obtained in our foreign relations, the undersigned, being engaged in no purpose of personal or party advancement, would rejoice, in such an occurrence.

The course of publick measures also at the opening of the session, gave hope that an enlarged & enlightened system of defence, with provision for, or security of our maritime rights, was about to be commenced; a purpose, which, wherever found, they deemed it their duty to foster, by giving, to any system of measures, thus comprehensive, as unobstructed a course as was consistent with their general sense of publick duty. After a course of policy, thus liberal and conciliatory, it was cause of regret that a communication should have been purchased by an unprecedented expenditure of secret service money; and used, by the chief magistrate, to disseminate suspicion and jealousy; and to excite resentment, among the citizens, by suggesting imputations against a portion of them, as unmerited by their patriotism, as unwarranted by evidence.

It has always been the opinion of the undersigned, that a system of peace was

the
the
from was ing b shoul into
of vir ten, u city a
in, hu
is con
own a
our ov
Why,
that of peace
pean
mour,
In a dential
ter tho
the per peculia
from th
the poli
form of experin independ relation well as cipitate
to trial,
by which
that of activity and dan
ment.
country
instituti
the un
mistake
war, we only from our mea political very ger
It app
wrongs,

the policy, which most comported with the character, condition, and interest of the United States; that their remoteness from the theatre of contest, in Europe, was their peculiar felicity and that nothing but a necessity, absolutely imperious, should induce them to enter as parties into wars, in which every consideration of virtue and policy seems to be forgotten, under the overbearing sway of rapacity and ambition. There is a new era in human affairs. The European world is convulsed. The advantages of our own situation are peculiar. "Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humour, or caprice?"

In addition to the many moral and prudential considerations, which should deter thoughtful men from hastening into the perils of such a war, there were some peculiar to the United States, resulting from the texture of the government and the political relations of the people. A form of government, in no small degree experimental, composed of powerful and independent sovereignties associated in relations, some of which are critical, as well as novel, should not be hastily precipitated into situations, calculated to put to trial, the strength of the moral bond, by which they are united. Of all states, that of war is most likely to call into activity the passions, which are hostile and dangerous to such a form of government. Time is yet important to our country to settle and mature its recent institutions. Above all, it appeared to the undersigned from signs not to be mistaken, that if we entered upon this war, we did it as a divided people; not only from a sense of the inadequacy of our means to success, but from moral and political objections of great weight and very general influence.

It appears to the undersigned, that the wrongs, of which the U. States have to complain, although in some aspects, very grievous to our interests, and in many humiliating to our pride, were yet of a nature which in the present state of the world, either would not justify war, or which war would not remedy. Thus, for instance the hovering of British vessels upon our coasts, and the occasional insults to our ports, imperiously demanded such a systematick application of harbour and seacoast defence, as would repel such aggressions; but in no light, can they be considered as making a resort to war, at the present time, on the part of the United States, either necessary or expedient. So also, with respect to the Indian war, of the origin of which, but very imperfect information has as yet been given to the publick. Without any express act of Congress, an expedition was last year, set on foot and prosecuted into Indian territory, which had been relinquished by treaty, on the part of the United States. And now we are told about the agency of British traders, as to Indian hostilities. It deserves consideration, whether there has been such provident attention, as would have been proper to remove any cause of complaint, either real or imaginary, which the Indians might allege, and to secure their friendship. With all the sympathy and anxiety excited by the state of that frontier; important as it may be, to apply adequate means of protection, against the Indians, how is its safety ensured by a declaration of war, which adds the British to the number of enemies?

As "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind" has not induced the two houses of congress to concur in declaring the reasons, or motives, for their enacting a declaration of war, the undersigned and he publick are left to search, elsewhere, for causes either real, or ostensible. If we are to consider the president of the United States, and the committee of the house of representatives, on foreign relations, as speaking on this solemn occasion, for congress, the United States have three principal topics of complaint against Great Britain. Impressments;—blockades;—and orders in council.

* Washington.

Concerning the subject of impressments, the undersigned sympathize with our unfortunate seamen, the victims of this abuse of power, and participate in the national sensibility, on their account. They do not conceal from themselves, both its importance and its difficulty; and they are well aware how stubborn is the will and how blind the vision of powerful nations, when great interests grow into controversy.

But, before a resort to war for such interests, a moral nation will consider what is just, and a wise nation what is expedient. If the exercise of any right to the full extent of its abstract nature, be inconsistent with the safety of another nation, morality seems to require that, in practice, its exercise should, in this respect, be modified. If it be proposed to vindicate any right by war, wisdom demands that it should be of a nature, by war to be obtained. The interests connected with the subjects of impressments are unquestionably great to both nations; and in the full extent of abstract right as asserted by each, perhaps irreconcilable.

The government of the United States asserts the broad principle, that the flag of their merchant vessels shall protect the mariners. This privilege is claimed, although every person on board, except the captain, may be an alien.

The British government asserts that the allegiance of their subjects is inalienable, in time of war; and that their seamen, found on the sea, the common highway of nations, shall not be protected by the flag of private merchant vessels.

The undersigned deem it unnecessary here to discuss the question of the American claim, for the immunity of their flag. But they cannot refrain from viewing it as a principle, of a nature very broad and comprehensive, to the abuse of which the temptations are strong and numerous. And they do maintain that, before the calamities of war, in vindication of such a principle be incurred, all the means of negotiation should be exhausted, and that also every practicable attempt should be made to regulate the exercise of the right; so that the acknowledged injury, resulting to other nations, should be checked, if not prevented. They are clearly of opinion that the peace of this happy and rising community should not be abandoned, for the sake of affording facilities to cover French property, or to employ British seamen.

The claim of Great Britain to the services of her seamen is neither novel nor peculiar. The doctrine of allegiance, for which she contends is common to all the governments of Europe. France, as well as England, has maintained it for centuries. Both nations claim, in time of war, the services of their subjects. Both by decrees forbid their entering into foreign employ. Both recall them by proclamation.

No man can doubt that, in the present state of the French marine, if American merchant vessels were met at sea, having French seamen on board, France would take them. Will any man believe that the United States would go to war against France, on this account?

For very obvious reasons, this principle occasions little collision with France, or with any other nation, except England. With the English nation, the people of the United States are closely assimilated, in blood, language, intercourse, habits, dress, manners, and character. When Britain is at war and the United States neutral, the merchant service of the United States holds out to British seamen, temptations almost irresistible;—high wages and peaceful employ; instead of low wages and war service;—safety, in lieu of hazard;—entire independence in the place of qualified servitude.

That England whose situation is insular, who is engaged in a war apparently for existence, whose seamen are her bulwark, should look upon the effect of our principle upon her safety with jealousy is inevitable; and that she will not hazard the unregu question for the virtuous ther was justified against lative r

A du wit he be asser require to arma to itself no duty right, in effect, a jects of erters a power?

Ce:al that the man rig while it should n a practic of flag is undeniab account for the men on b

The c o no fur seamen in the ex ke Am en, in ough a roffers oubtedly the se he ques ch cau ccommo xtinguil proper u lated a tion, a jury? The u on that ard the practical consequences of its unregulated exercise is certain. The question, therefore, presented, directly, for the decision of the thoughtful and virtuous mind, in this country, is—whether war, for such an abstract right be justifiable, before attempting to guard against its injurious tendency by legislative regulation, in failure of treaty.

A dubious right should be advanced with hesitation. An extreme right should be asserted with discretion. Moral duty requires that a nation, before it appeals to arms, should have been not only true to itself, but that it should have failed in no duty to others. If the exercise of a right, in an unregulated manner, be in effect, a standing invitation to the subjects of a foreign power, to become deserters and traitors, is it no injury to that power?

Certainly moral obligation demands that the right of flag, like all other human rights, should be so used, as that, while it protects what is our own, it should not injure what is another's. In a practical view, and so long as the right of flag is restrained, by no regard to the undeniable interests of others, a war, on account of impressments, is only a war for the right of employing British seamen on board American merchant vessels.

The claim of Great Britain pretends to no further extent than to take British seamen from private merchant vessels. In the exercise of this claim, her officers take American seamen, and foreign seamen, in the American service; and although she disclaims such abuses, and offers redress, when known, yet undoubtedly grievous injuries have resulted to the seamen of the United States. But the question is: Can war be proper for such cause, before all hope of reasonable accommodation has failed? Even after the extinguishment of such hope, can it be proper until our own practice be so regulated as to remove, in such foreign nations, any reasonable apprehension of injury?

The undersigned are clearly of opinion that the employment of British seamen, in the merchants' service of the U. States, is as little reconcilable with the permanent as the present interest of the United States. The encouragement of foreign seamen is the discouragement of the native American.

The duty of government towards this valuable class of men is not only to protect but to patronize them. And this cannot be done more effectually than by securing to American citizens the privileges of American navigation.

The question of impressment, like every other question relative to commerce, has been treated in such a manner, that what was possessed is lost without obtaining what was sought. Pretensions, right in theory, and important in interest, urged, without due consideration of our relative power, have eventuated in a practical abandonment, both of what we hoped and what we enjoyed. In attempting to spread our flag over foreigners, its distinctive character has been lost to our own citizens.

The American seaman, whose interest it is to have no competitors in his employment, is sacrificed, that British seamen may have equal privileges with himself.

Ever since the U. States have been a nation, this subject has been a matter of complaint and negotiation; and every former administration have treated it, according to its obvious nature, as a subject rather for arrangement than for war. It existed in the time of Washington; yet this father of his country recommended no such resort. It existed in the time of Adams; yet notwithstanding the zeal in support of our maritime rights which distinguished his administration, war was never suggested by him as the remedy. During the eight years Mr. Jefferson stood at the helm of affairs, it still continued a subject of controversy and negotiation: but it was never made a cause for war. It was reserved for the present administration to press this topic to the extreme and most dreadful resort of nations; although England has officially disavowed the right of impressment as it respects native citizens, and an arrangement might well be made consistent with the fair pretensions of such as are naturalized.

That the real state of this question may be understood, the undersigned recur to the following facts as supported by official documents. Mr. King, when minister in England, obtained a disavowal of the British government of the right to impress American seamen, naturalized as well as native, on the high seas. An arrangement had advanced nearly to a conclusion upon this basis, and was broken off only because G. Britain insisted to retain the right on the narrow seas. What, however, was the opinion of the American minister on the probability of an arrangement appears from the publick documents communicated to congress in the session of 1808; as stated by Mr. Madison, in these words: "At the moment the articles were expected to be signed, an exception of 'the narrow seas' was urged and insisted on by lord St. Vincents, and being utterly inadmissible on our part, the negotiation was abandoned."

Mr. King seems to be of opinion, however, that "with more time than was left him for the experiment, the objection might have been overcome." What time was left Mr. King for the experiment, or whether any was ever made, has not been disclosed to the publick. Mr. King, soon after returned to America—It is manifest from Mr. King's expression that he was limited in point of time, and it is equally clear that his opinion was, that an adjustment could take place. That Mr. Madison was also of the same opinion is demonstrated by his letters to Messrs. Monroe and Pinkney, dated the 3d of February, 1807, in which he uses these expressions: "I take it for granted that you have not failed to make due use of the arrangement concerted by Mr. King with lord Hawksbury in the year 1802, for settling the question of impressment. On that occasion, and under that administration, the British principle was fairly renounced in favour of the right of our flag, lord Hawksbury having agreed to prohibit impressments on the high seas; and lord St. Vincents requiring nothing more than an exception of the narrow seas, an exception resting on the obsolete claim of G. Britain to some peculiar dominion over them." Here then we have a full acknowledgment that G. Britain was willing to renounce the right of impressment on the high seas in favour of our flag; that she was anxious to arrange the subject.

It further appears that the British ministry called for an interview with Messrs. Monroe and Pinkney, on this topick; that they stated the nature of the claim, the king's prerogative; that they had consulted the crown officers and the board of admiralty, who all concurred in sentiment, that under the circumstances of the nation, the relinquishment of the right was a measure, which the government could not adopt, without taking on itself a responsibility, which no ministry would be willing to meet, however pressing the exigency might be. They offered, however, on the part of Great Britain, to pass laws making it penal for British commanders to impress American citizens, on board of American vessels, on the high seas, if America would pass a law, making it penal for the officers of the United States to grant certificates of citizenship to British subjects. This will be found, in the same documents, in a letter from Messrs. Monroe and Pinkney to Mr. Madison, dated 11th November, 1806. Under their peremptory instructions, this proposition, on the part of Great Britain, could not be acceded to by our ministers. Such, however, was the temper and anxiety of England, and such the candour and good sense of our ministers, that an honourable and advantageous arrangement did take place. The authority of Mr. Monroe, then minister at the court of Great Britain, now secretary of state, and one of the present administration, who have recommended war with England, and assigned impressments as a cause, supports the under-

signe
able from ruary ing o roci;
lieved
on wh place missi
the e
was b
the U cessid
Great
conte forma
ment their
W cided missi
plicit curri aband
and v ous a Mont
hope how caus
W ades;
as as block porte
this tain.
fract
T
mad
Fran
Yet, whic
betw
time
of fa ject vag whi
me
this

Hawkebury
 Impressments
 St. Vincents
 an exception
 of G. Brinition over a full ac-
 in was wil-
 of impress-
 your of our arrange the

British mi-view with ey, on this nature of the
 : that they
 cers and the concurred in cumstances
 ment of the the govern-
 nt taking on no ministry
 ever press-
 They offer-
 Great Britain,
 for British erican citi-
 vessels, on ould pass a e officers of rtificates of icts. This cuments, in e and Pink-
 th Novem-mptory in-
 the part of eeded to by er, was the d, and such
 of our mi-
 and advan-
 ace. The n minister
 now secre-
 present admended
 d impress-
 the undersigned in asserting, that it was honourable and advantageous: for in a letter from Richmond dated the 29th of February, 1803, to Mr. Madison, the following expressions are used by Mr. Monroe: "I have, on the contrary always believed and still do believe that the ground on which that interest [impressment] was placed by the paper of the British commissioners of 8th November, 1806, and the explanation which accompanied it, was both honourable and advantageous to the United States, that it contained a concession in their favour on the part of Great Britain, on the great principle in contestation, never before made by a formal and obligatory act of their government, which was highly favourable to their interest."

With the opinion of Mr. King so decidedly expressed; with the official admission of Mr. Madison; with the explicit declaration of Mr. Monroe, all con-curring that Great Britain was ready to abandon impressment on the high seas, and with an honourable and advantageous arrangement, actually made by Mr.
 Monroe, how can it be pretended, that all hope of settlement, by treaty, has failed?
 how can this subject furnish a proper cause of war?

With respect to the subject of blockades; the principle of the law of nations, as asserted by the U. States, is, that a blockade can only be justified when supported by an adequate force. In theory this principle is admitted by Great Britain. It is alleged, however, that in practice she disregards that principle.

The order of blockade, which has been made a specific ground of complaint by France, is that of the 16th of May 1806.
 Yet, strange as it may seem, this order, which is, now, made one ground of war between the two countries, was, at the time of its first issuing, viewed as an act of favour and conciliation. On this subject it is necessary to be explicit. The vague and indeterminate manner, in which the American and French governments, in their official papers, speak of this order of blockade, is calculated to mislead. An importance is attached to it, of which, in the opinion of the undersigned, it is not worthy. Let the facts speak for themselves.

In Aug. 1804, the British established a blockade at the entrance of the French ports, naming them, from Fecam to Ostend; and from their proximity to the British coasts, and the absence of all complaint, we may be permitted to believe that it was a legal blockade, enforced according to the usages of nations.
 On the 16th of May, 1806, the English secretary of state, Mr. Fox, notified to our minister at London, that his government had thought fit to direct necessary measures to be taken for the blockade of the coasts, rivers and ports, from the river Elbe to the river Brest, both inclusive.*

In point of fact, as the terms used in the order will show, this paper, which has become a substantive and avowed cause for non intercourse, embargo and war, is a blockade, only of the places, on the French coast, from Ostend to the Seine, and even as to these it is, merely, as it professes to be, a continuance of a former and existing blockade. For with respect to the residue of the coast, trade of neutrals is admitted, with the exception only, of enemy's property and articles contraband of war, which are liable to be taken, without a blockade; and except the direct colonial trade of the enemy, which Great Britain denied to be

* The terms of the order are these: "That the said coast, rivers and ports must be considered as blockaded," but, "that such blockade shall not extend to prevent neutral ships and vessels, laden with goods, not being the property of his majesty's enemies, and not being contraband of war from approaching the said coasts and entering into and sailing from the said rivers and ports save and except the coast-rivers and ports from Ostend to the river Seine, already in a state of strict and rigorous blockade; and which are to be considered as so continued," with a proviso that the vessels entering had not been laden at a port belonging to,
 or in possession of, the enemies of G. Britain, and the vessels departing were not destined to an enemy port, or had previously broken blockade."

free by the law of nations. Why the order was thus extended, in its form, while in effect it added nothing to orders and regulations, already existing, will be known by adverting to papers which are before the world. In 1806, France had yet colonies; and the wound inflicted on our feelings, by the interference of the British government in our trade with those colonies, had been the cause of remonstrance and negotiation. At the moment when the order of May 1806, was made, Mr. Monroe, the present secretary of state, then our minister plenipotentiary at the court of Great Britain, was in treaty on the subject of the carrying trade, and judging on the spot, and at the time, he unhesitatingly gave his opinion, that the order was made to favour American views and interests. This idea is unequivocally expressed, in Mr. Monroe's letters to Mr. Madison of the 17th, and 20th* of May, and of the 9th of June, 1806.

And as late as October, 1811, the same gentleman, writing as secretary of state to the British minister, speaking of the same order of blockade of May, 1806, says: "It strictly was little more than a

* The following are extracts from these letters. In that of the 17th May 1806, he thus speaks of that blockade. It is "couched in terms of restraint, and professes to extend the blockade further than was heretofore done. nevertheless, it takes it from many ports already blockaded, indeed, from all East of Ostend, and West of the Seine, except in articles contraband of war and enemies property, which are seizable without blockade. And in like form of exception, considering every enemy as one power, it admits the trade of neutrals, within the same limits, to be free in the productions of enemies colonies, in every, but the direct route between the colony and the parent country." Mr. Monroe adds: "It cannot be doubted that the note was drawn by the government, in reference to the question, and if intended as the foundation of a treaty, must be viewed in a very favourable light." On the 20th of May, Mr. Monroe writes to Mr. Madison, that he had been "strengthened in the opinion that the order of the 16th was drawn with a view to the question of our trade with enemies colonies, and that it promises to be highly satisfactory to our commercial interests."

blockade of the coast from Seine to Ostend." "The object was to afford to the U. States an accommodation respecting the colonial trade."

It appears, then, that this order was in point of fact, made to favour our trade and was so understood and admitted by the government of this country, at that time and since; that, instead of extending prior blockades it lessened them: that the country from Seine to Brest, and from Ostend to Elbe was inserted to open them to our colonial trade and for our accommodation, and that it was never made the subject of complaint, by the American government, during its practical continuance; that is; not until the first order in council; and indeed, not until after the first of May 1810; and until after the American government was apprised of the ground, which it was the will of France should be taken upon the subject.

Of this we have the most decisive proof in the offers, made under the administration of Mr. Jefferson, for the discontinuance of the embargo as it related to Great Britain; none of which required the repeal of the blockade of May 1806; and also in the arrangement made during the administration of Mr. Madison, and under his eye with Mr. Erskine. The non intercourse act of March 1809, and the act "concerning commercial intercourse" of May 1810, vest the president of the United States with the very same power, in the very same terms. Both authorize him "in case either G. Britain or France shall so revoke or modify her edicts, as that they shall cease to violate the neutral commerce of the United States," to declare the same by proclamation. And, by the provisions of one law in such case, non intercourse was to cease; by those of the other it was to be revived. In consequence of power vested, by the first act, the arrangement with Erskine was made and the revocation of the orders in council of January and November 1807, was considered as a full compliance with the law and as removing all the anti-neutral edicts.—

The
clud not a cien
thou 1810 a re 1806 non;
after avov not orde
tion
of t just that is le aded
T
just now wha prin even
Brit
and doct
the hen bec
pen por
fore
I
par
to tain
put nat
unl de zar
rat 26
M
th ve sp an
w

The blockade of May 1806, was not included in the arrangement, and it does not appear, that it was deemed of sufficient importance to engage even a thought. Yet under the act of May, 1810, which vests the very same power, a revocation of this blockade of May 1806, is made by our cabinet a sine qua non; an indispensable requisite! And now after the British minister has directly avowed that this order of blockade would not continue after a revocation of the orders in council, without a due application of an adequate force, the existence of this blockade is insisted upon, as a justifiable cause of war, notwithstanding, that our government admits a blockade is legal, to the maintenance of which an adequate force is applied.

The undersigned are aware that in justification of this new ground, it is now said that the extension on paper, for whatever purpose intended, favours the principle of paper blockades. This however, can hardly be urged, since the British* formally disavow the principle; and since they acknowledge the very doctrine of the law of nations for which the American administration contend, henceforth the existence of a blockade becomes a question of fact: it must depend upon the evidence adduced in support of the adequacy of the blockading force.

From the preceding statement it is apparent that whatever there is objection-

* Mr. Foster in his letter of the 3d July 1811, to Mr. Monroe, thus states the doctrine maintained by his government.

"Great Britain has never attempted to dispute that, in the ordinary course of the law of nations, no blockade can be justifiable or valid, unless it be supported by an adequate force destined to maintain it, and to expose to hazard all vessels attempting to evade its operation."

Mr. Foster in his letter to Mr. Monroe of the 26th July, 1811, also says: "The blockade of May 1806, will not continue after the repeal of the orders in council, unless his majesty's government shall think fit to sustain it by the special application of a sufficient naval force, and the fact of its being so continued, or not, will be notified at the time."

able in the principle of the order of May 1806, or in the practice under it; on ground merely American, it cannot be set up as a sufficient cause of war; for until France pointed it out as a cause of controversy, it was so far from being regarded as a source of any new or grievous complaint, that it was actually considered by our government in a favourable light.

The British orders in council are the remaining source of discontent, and avowed cause of war. These have heretofore been considered by our government in connexion with the French decrees. Certainly the British orders in council and French decrees form a system subversive of neutral rights and constitute just grounds of complaint, yet, viewed relatively to the condition of those powers towards each other, and of the United States towards both, the undersigned cannot persuade themselves that the orders in council as they now exist and with their present effect and operation, justify the selection of Great Britain as our enemy, and render necessary a declaration of unqualified war.

Every consideration of moral duty, and political expedience, seems to concur in warning the United States, not to mingle in this hopeless and, to human eye, interminable European contest. Neither France nor England pretends that their aggressions can be defended on the ground of any other belligerent right than that of particular necessity.

Both attempt to justify their encroachments on the general law of nations by the plea of retaliation. In the relative position and proportion of strength of the United States to either belligerent, there appeared little probability that we could compel the one or the other, by hostile operations, to abandon this plea.

And as the field of commercial enterprise, after allowing to the decrees and orders their full practical effect, is still rich and extensive, there seemed as little wisdom as obligation to yield solid and certain realities for unattainable pretensions. The right of retaliation, as existing in either belligerent, it was impossible for the United States, consistent with either its duty or interest, to admit. Yet such was the state of the decrees and orders of the respective belligerents, in relation to the rights of neutrals, that, while, on the one hand, it formed no justification to either, so on the other, concurrent circumstances formed a complete justification to the United States in maintaining, notwithstanding these encroachments, provided it best comported with their interests, that system of impartial neutrality, which is so desirable to their peace and prosperity.— For if it should be admitted, which no course of argument can maintain, that the Berlin decree, which was issued on the 21st of November, 1806, was justified by the antecedent orders of the British admiralty, respecting the colonial trade, and by the order of blockade of the 16th of May, preceding, yet on this account, there resulted no right of retaliation to France, as it respected the United States. They had expressed no acquiescence either in the British interference with the colonial trade, or in any extension of the principles of blockade. Besides, had there been any such neglect, on the part of the United States, as warranted the French emperor in adopting his principle of retaliation, yet in the exercise of that pretended right, he past the bounds of both publick law and decency; and in the very extravagance of that exercise, lost the advantage of whatever colour the British had afforded to his pretences. Not content with adopting a principle of retaliation, in terms limited, and appropriate to the injury of which he complained, he declared, “all the British Islands, in a state of blockade; prohibited all commerce and correspondence with them, all trade in their manufactures; and made lawful prize of all merchandise, belonging to England, or coming from its manufactories, and colonies.” The violence of these encroachments was equalled only by the insidiousness of the terms, and manner, in which they were promulgated. The scope of the expressions of the Berlin decree, was so general that it embraced within its sphere, the whole commerce of neutrals with England. Yet Decres, Minister of the Marine of France, by a formal note, of the 24th December, 1806, assured our minister plenipotentiary, that the imperial decree, of the 21st November, 1806, “was not to affect our commerce, which would still be governed by the rules of the treaty, established between the two countries.” Notwithstanding this assurance, however, on the 18th September following Regnier Grand Minister of justice, declared “that the intentions of the Emperor were that by virtue of that decree French armed vessels, might seize in neutral vessels, either English property, or merchandise proceeding from the English manufactories; and that he had reserved, for future decision the question whether they might not possess themselves of neutral vessels going to or from England, although they had no English manufactures on board.” Pretensions so obviously exceeding any measure of retaliation that, if the precedent acts of the British government, had afforded to such a resort, any colour of right, it was lost in the violence, and extravagance of these assumed principles.

To the Berlin decree succeeded the British orders in council, of the 7th of January, 1807, which were merged in the orders of the 11th of November following. These declared “all ports, and places belonging to France, and its allies, from which the British flag was excluded, all in the colonies of his Britannick majesty’s enemies; in a state of blockade;—prohibiting all trade, in the produce and manufactures, of the said countries or colonies; and making all vessels trading to or from them, and all merchandise, on board subject to capture and condemnation, with an exception, only in favour of the direct trade, between neutral countries and the colonies of his majesty’s enemies.”

These extravagant pretensions, on the part of Great Britain, were immeexpressions of general that re, the whole th England. the Marine of of the, 24th our minister perial decree, 06, "was not ch would still of the treaty, o countries." France, howe- er following of justice, de- of the Emper- e that decree eize in neu- property, or in the English had reserved, sition whether selves of neu- England, al- manufactures e obviously of retaliation of the British o such a re- was lost in nce of these ceeded the of the 7th of merged in umber fol- ll ports, and nd its allies, was exclu- Britannick e of block- in the pro- e said coun- all vessels l all mer- apture and ion, only in eeen neu- ies of his nsions, on re immediately succeeded by others, still more extravagant on the part of France.— Without waiting for any knowledge of the course the American government would take, in relation to the British orders in council, the French Emperour issued, on the 17th of December following, his Milan decree, by which "every ship of whatever nation, which shall have submitted to search, by an English ship, or to a voyage to England, or paid any tax to that government, are declared denationalized and lawful prize.

"The British Islands are declared in a state of blockade, by sea and land, and every ship of whatever nation, or whatsoever the nature of its cargo may be, that sails from England, or those of the English colonies, or of countries occupied by English troops, and proceeding to England, or to the English colonies, or to countries occupied by the English, to be good prize." The nature and extent of these injuries thus accumulated by mutual efforts of both belligerents, seemed to teach the American statesman this important lesson; not to attach the cause of his country to one, or the other; but by systematick and solid provisions, for seacoast and maritime defence, to place its interests, as far as its situation and resources permits beyond the reach of the rapacity, or ambition of any European power. Happy would it have been for our country, if a course of policy, so simple and obvious, had been adopted!

Unfortunately administration had recourse to a system, complicated in its nature, and destructive in its effects: which, instead of relief from the accumulated injuries of foreign governments, served only to fill up, what was wanting in the measure of evils abroad, by artificial embarrassments at home. As long ago as the year 1794; Mr. Madison, the present president of the U States, then a member of the House of Representatives, devised and proposed a system of commercial restrictions, which had for its object the coercion of Great Britain, by a denial to her of our products and our market; asserting that the former was, in a manner essential to her prosperity, either as necessaries of life, or as raw materials for her manufactures; and that without the latter, a great proportion of her labouring classes, could not subsist.

In that day of sage and virtuous forethought, the proposition was rejected. It remained, however, a theme of unceasing panegyrick among an active class of American politicians, who with a systematick pertinacity inculcated among the people, that commercial restrictions were a species of warfare, which would ensure success to the United States, and humiliation to Great Britain.

There were two circumstances, inherent in this system of coercing Great Britain by commercial restrictions, which ought to have made practical politicians very doubtful of its result, and very cautious of its trial. These were the state of opinion in relation to its efficacy among commercial men in the United States; and the state of feeling which a resort to it would unavoidably produce in Great Britain. On the one hand, it was undeniable that the great body of commercial men in the United States had no belief in such a dependence of Great Britain upon the United States, either for our produce or our market, as the system implied.

Without the hearty cooperation of this class of men, success in its attempt was obviously unattainable. And as on them the chief suffering would fall, it was altogether unreasonable to expect that they would become cooperating instruments in support of any system which was ruin to them and without hope to their country. On the other hand, as it respects Great Britain, a system proceeding upon the avowed principle of her dependence upon us was among the last to which a proud and powerful nation would yield.

Notwithstanding these obvious considerations, in April, 1806, Mr. Madison being then secretary of state, a law passed congress prohibiting the importation of certain specified manufactures of Great Britain and her dependencies, on the basis of Mr. Madison's original proposition. Thus the United States entered on the system of commercial hostility against G. Britain.

The decree of Berlin was issued in the ensuing November (1806.) The treaty, which had been signed at London, in December, 1806, having been rejected by Mr. Jefferson without being presented to the senate for ratification, and the non-importation act not being repealed but only suspended, Great Britain issued her orders in council, on the 11th November, 1807.

On the 21st of the same month of November, Champagny, French minister of foreign affairs, wrote to Mr. Armstrong, the American minister, in the words following: "All the difficulties which have given rise to your reclamations, sir, would be removed with ease, if the government of the United States, after complaining in vain of the injustice and violations of England, took, with the whole continent, the part of guarantying it therefrom."

On the 17th of the ensuing December the Milan decrees were issued on the part of France, and five days afterwards the embargo was passed on the part of the United States. Thus was completed, by acts nearly cotemporaneous, the circle of commercial hostilities.

After an ineffectual trial of four years to control the policy of the two belligerents by this system, it was, on the part of the United States, for a time, relinquished. The act of the 1st May, 1810, gave the authority, however, to the president of the United States to revive it against G. Britain, in case France revoked her decrees. Such revocation on the part of France was declared by the president's proclamation on the 2d Nov. 1810, and, in consequence, non intercourse was revived by our administration against G. Britain.

At all times the undersigned have looked with much anxiety for the evidence of this revocation. They wished not to question what, in various forms, has been so often asserted by the administration, and its agents by their direction. But neither as publick men nor as citizens can they consent that the peace and prosperity of the country should be sacrificed, in maintenance of a position, which on no principle of evidence they deem tenable. They cannot falsify or conceal their conviction that the French decrees neither have been nor are revoked.

Without pretending to occupy the whole field of argument which the question of revocation has opened, a concise statement seems inseperable from the occasion.

The condition on which the non intercourse, according to the act of 1st May, 1810, might be revived against G. Britain, was, on the part of France, an effectual revocation of her decrees. What the president of the U. States was bound to require from the French government was, the evidence of such effectual revocation. Upon this point both the right of the U. States and the duty of the president seem to be resolved into very distinct and undeniable principles. The object to be obtained for the United States from France was, an effectual revocation of the decrees. A revocation to be effectual must include, in the nature of things, this essential requisite; the wrongs done to the neutral commerce of the U. States, by the operation of the decrees, must be stopped. Nothing short of this could be an effectual revocation.

Without reference to the other wrongs resulting from those decrees to the commerce of the United States, it will be sufficient to state the prominent wrong done by the 3d article of the Milan decree.* The nature of this wrong essen-

* This article is in these words:

"Art. III. The British islands are declared to be in a state of blockade, both by land and sea. Every ship of whatever nation, or whatsoever the nature of its cargo may be, that sails from the ports of England, or those of the English colonies and of the countries occupied by English troops and proceeding to England, or to the English Colonies, or to countries occupied by English troops is good and lawful tially consisted in the authority given to French ships of war and privateers to make prize, at sea, of every neutral vessel sailing to or from any of the English possessions. The authority to capture was the very essence of the wrong. It follows, therefore, that an effectual revocation required that the authority to capture should be annulled. Granting, therefore, for the sake of argument (what from its terms and its nature was certainly not the case) that the noted letter of the duke of Cadore of the 5th of August, 1810, held forth a revocation, good in point of form, and unconditional, yet it was not that effectual revocation for which the act of 1st May, 1810, alone authorized the president of the U. States to issue his proclamation, unless in consequence of that letter the authority to capture was annulled. The letter itself is no annulment of the authority to capture, and it is notorious that no evidence of the annulment of this authority to capture ever has been adduced. It has not even been pretended. On the contrary, there is decisive and almost daily evidence of the continued existence of this authority to capture.

The charge of executing the decrees of Berlin and Milan was, so far as concerned his department, given, by the terms of those decrees, to the French minister of marine. According to established principles of general law, the imperial act which gave the authority must be annulled by another imperial act, equally formal and solemn; or, at least, the authority to capture must be countermanded by some order or instruction from the minister of marine. Nothing short of this could annul the authority according to the rule of the sea service. Was such annulling act ever issued by the French emperor? Were any such countermanding orders or instructions ever given by the French minister of marine? In exercising a trust committed to him prize, as contrary to the present decree, and may be captured by our ships of war, or our privateers, and adjudged to the captor."

by the legislature, on a point so interesting to the neutral commerce of the U. States, and so important to the peace of the nation, was it not the duty of the president to have the evidence of such annulment before the issuing of any proclamation? Has he ever insisted upon such evidence? Was it of no consequence in the relative situation of this country as to foreign powers that the regular evidence should be received by our administration and made known? Why has a matter of evidence, so obviously proper, so simple in its nature, so level to general apprehension, and so imperiously demanded by the circumstances of the case, been wholly omitted? And why, if the Berlin and Milan decrees are annulled, as is pretended, does the French emperor withhold this evidence of their annulment? Why does he withhold it when the question of revocation is presented under circumstances of so much urgency?

Not only has it never been pretended that any such imperial act of annulment has issued, or that any such orders or instructions, countermanding the authority to capture, were ever given, but there is decisive evidence of the reverse in the conduct of the French publick armed ships and privateers. At all times since Nov. 1810, these ships and privateers have continued to capture our vessels and property on the high seas, upon the principles of the Berlin and Milan decrees. A numerous list of American vessels thus taken since the 1st of Nov. 1810, now exists in the office of the secretary of state; and among the captures are several vessels, with their cargoes, lately taken and destroyed at sea, without the formality of a trial, by the commander of a French squadron at this moment cruising against our commerce, under orders given by the minister of marine, to whom the execution of the decrees was committed; and these, too, issued in January last. In the Baltick and Mediterranean seas, captures by French privateers are known to us, by official documents, to have been made under the authority of these decrees. How then are they revoked? How have they ceased to violate our neutral commerce?

Had any repeal, or modification of those decrees, in truth taken place, it must have been communicated to the prize courts, and would have been evidenced by some variation either in their rules, or in the principles of their decisions. In vain, however, will this nation seek for such proof of the revocation of the decrees. No acquittal has ever been had, in any of the prize courts, upon the ground that the Berlin and Milan decrees had ceased, even as it respects the United States. On the contrary, the evidence is decisive that they are considered by the French courts as existing.

There are many cases corroborative of this position. It is enough to state only two, which appear in the official reports. The American ship Julian was captured by a French privateer on the 4th July 1811, and on the tenth of September 1811, the vessel and cargo were condemned by the council of prizes at Paris, among other reasons, because she was visited by several English vessels. On the same day the Hercules an American ship was condemned by the imperial court of prizes, alleging "that it was impossible, that she was not visited by the enemy's ships of war." So familiar to them was the existence of the decrees, and such their eagerness to give them effect against our commerce, that they fained a visitation to have taken place, and that notwithstanding the express declaration of the captain and crew to the contrary. In addition to which evidence Mr. Russell's letter to the secretary of state, dated 8th May 1811, says: "It may not be improper to remark that no American vessel captured since the 1st November 1810, has yet been released."

From this it is apparent that the commanders of the national vessels, the privateersmen and the judges of the prize courts, to which may be added also the custom house officers, who, as the instruments of carrying into effect the decrees, must have been made acquainted with the repeal had it existed, have been, from first to last, ignorant of any revocation; and uniformly acted upon the principle of their existence.

If other evidence of the continued existence of those decrees were requisite, the acts of the French government afford such as is full and explicit. Champagny, duke of Cadore, minister of foreign relations, in his report to his majesty the emperor and king, dated Paris, 3d December, 1810, speaking of the decrees of Berlin and Milan, says expressly: "As long as England shall persist in her orders in council, your majesty will persist in your decrees"—Than which no declaration can be more direct not only that the Berlin and Milan decrees are unrevoked, but that they will so remain, until the English orders in council are withdrawn. And in the address delivered by his imperial majesty, Napoleon, to the council of commerce on the 31st March 1811, he thus declares: "The decrees of Berlin and Milan are the fundamental laws of my empire. For the neutral navigation I consider the flag, as an extension of territory. The power which suffers its flag to be violated, cannot be considered as neutral. The fate of the American commerce will soon be decided. I will favour it if the United States conform themselves to these decrees. In a contrary case their vessels will be driven from my empire."

And as late as the 10th of March last, in a report of the French minister of foreign relations, communicated to the conservative senate, it is declared "that as long as the British orders in council are not revoked, and the principles of the treaty of Utrecht, in relation to neutrals put in force, the decrees of Berlin and Milan ought to subsist, for the powers who suffer their flag to be denationalized." In none of these acts is there any exception in favour of the U. States. And on the contrary in the report of March last, by placing those decrees on the basis of "the principles of the treaty of Utrecht," the French minister has extended the terms of revocation beyond all prior pretensions.

existed, have
want of any reed upon the

continued ex-
ere requisite,
nment afford
Champagne,
of foreign re-
majesty the Paris, 3d Dehe decrees of ressly: "As ist in her ory will persist
ich no decla-
not only that es are unre-
remain, until cil are with-delivered by oleon, to the 31st March e decrees of fundamental e neutral na-
as an exten-
r which suf-
annot be conte of the Abe decided.
l States concrees. In a ill be driven

March last,
minister of ated to the lared "that in council
inciples of
tion to neu-
es of Berlin
st, for the
to be de-ese acts is r of the U.
in the re-
inciples of ench minis-
revocation

Those who maintain the revocation of these decrees as it respects the United States, rely wholly upon the suspension of the decisions of the French prize courts, in relation to some few vessels, and the liberation of others, by the special direction of the French emperor. Can there be stronger presumptive evidence of the existence of those decrees than this—that no vessel is excepted from their operation, until after the special exercise of the emperor's will, in the particular case.

If the decrees were effectively revoked, there would be no captures; or if any were made, liberation would be a matter of course and of general right; instead of being an affair of particular favour or caprice. Is it for vexations and indulgencies like these, that the people of the United States are to abandon their commerce and peace? Is it for such favours they are to invite the calamities of war? If the resources of negotiation were exhausted, had the government no powers remaining to diminish the causes of national controversy, by preventing abuses? After this, had it no powers to provide for protecting indisputable and important rights, without waging a war of offence? In the regular exercise of legislative and executive powers, might not the fair objects of interest for our country have been secured completely by consistent and wholesome plans for defensive protection? And would not a national position, strictly defensive, yet highly respectable, have been less burdensome to the people than the projected war? Would it not be more friendly to the cause of our own seamen—more safe for our navigation and commerce; more favourable to the interests of our agriculture; less hazardous to national character; more worthy of a people jealous of their liberty and independence?

For entering into these hostilities is there any thing in the friendship or commerce of France in its nature very interesting or alluring? Will the reaping of the scanty fields of French trade, which we seek, in any way compensate for the rich harvest of general commerce, which by war we are about to abandon? When entering into a war, with Great Britain, for commercial rights and interests, it seems impossible not to inquire into the state of our commercial relations with France, and the advantages the United States will obtain. We may thus be enabled to judge whether the prize is worth the contest.

By an official statement, made to congress during the present session, it appears that of 45,294,000 dollars of domestic productions of the United States, exported from September 30th, 1810, to October 1st, 1811, only 1,194,275 dollars were exported to France and Italy, including Sicily, not a dependency of France.

France is now deprived of all her foreign colonies, and by reviewing our trade with that country for several years past and before the date of the orders in council, it will appear that, exclusive of her foreign possessions, it has been comparatively inconsiderable. The annexed statement marked A taken from official documents, shows the quantity of particular articles, the produce of the United States exported to all the world, distinguishing the amount both to France and to England and her dependencies from 1810 to 1811. From this statement it appears, how small a proportion of the great staples of our country is taken * by

* It appears by it that for twelve years past France has not taken in any year, more than

Cotton	7,000,000 pounds
Rice	7,000 tierces
Tobacco	16,000 hogsheads
Dried Fish	87,000 quintals

Of flower, naval stores, and lumber, none of any importance.

It also appears, by it, that the annual average taken by France for twelve years, was, of

Cotton	2,664,090 pounds
Rice	2,253 tierces,
Tobacco	5,927 hogsheads
Fish	24,735 quintals

Of late years some of these articles have not been shipped at all directly to France, but they have, probably, found their way thither through the northern ports of Europe.

France. While France retained her colonies produce found its way to the mother country through the United States, and our trade with her in these articles, was not inconsiderable. But since she has been deprived of her foreign possessions, and since the establishment of her municipal regulations, as to licenses, this trade has been in a great degree, annihilated. With respect to colonial produce none can be imported into France except from particular ports of the United States and under special imperial licenses. For these licenses our merchants must pay what the agents of the French government think proper to demand. As to articles of our domestick produce, they are burdened with such exorbitant duties, and are subjected to such regulations and restrictions on their importation as, in ordinary times, will amount to a prohibition. On the 5th of August 1810, the very day of the duke of Cadore's noted letter, a duty was imposed on all sea island cotton, imported into France, of more than eighty cents per pound, and on other cotton of about sixty cents per pound, amounting to three or four, times their original cost in the United States. And as to tobacco, the French minister here on, the 23d July 1811 informed our government that it was "under an administration [en regie] in France; the administration (he says) is the only consumer and can purchase only the quantity necessary for its consumption." And by other regulations not more than one fiftieth of all the tobacco consumed in France, can be of foreign growth. The ordinary quantity of tobacco annually consumed in France is estimated at thirty thousand hogsheads, leaving only about two thousand hogsheads of foreign tobacco to be purchased in France.

In addition to these impositions and restrictions, the importer is not left at liberty with respect to his return cargo. By other edicts, he is compelled to vest the avails of his importations, if, after paying duties and seizures, any remain, in such articles of French produce and manufacture, as the French government thinks proper to direct. Two thirds at least must be laid out in silks and the other third in wines, brandies, and other articles, of that country. To show that this account of our commercial relations with France does not rest on doubtful authority, the undersigned would refer to the statements and declarations of our government on this subject. In a letter from Mr. Smith, the late secretary of state, to the minister of France here, of the 18th December, 1810, speaking of our trade to that country, under its regulations, after the pretended repeal of the decrees, Mr. Smith says: "The restrictions of the Berlin and Milan decrees had the effect of restraining the American merchants from sending their vessels to France. The interdictions in the system that has been substituted, against the admission of American products, will have the effect of imposing upon them an equal restraint."

"If then, for the revoked decrees, municipal laws, producing the same commercial effect have been substituted, the mode only, and not the measure, has undergone an alteration. And however true it may be, that the change is lawful in form, it is, nevertheless, as true, that it is essentially unfriendly, and that it does not at all comport with the ideas, inspired by your letter of the 27th ult. in which you were pleased to declare the distinctly pronounced intention of his imperial majesty of favouring the commercial relations, between France and the United States, in all the objects of traffick, which shall evidently proceed from their agriculture, or manufactures." "If France by her own acts, has blockaded up her ports against the introduction of the products of the United States, what motive has this government, in a discussion with a third power, to insist on the privilege of going to France? Whence the inducement, to urge the annulment of a blockade of France, when, if annulled, no American cargoes could obtain a market in any of her ports? In such a state of things, a block-

ch government

Two thirds at n silks and the dies, and other

To show that

mercial relations

est on doubtful

ed would refer

larations of our

ect. In a letter

the secretary of

France here, of

10, speaking of

under its regu-

ed repeal of the

"The restriction decrees had

the American

their vessels to

s in the system

d, against the

products, will

g upon them an

oked decrees,

ng the same

en substituted,

measure, has

And however

change is law-

less, as true,

ndly, and that

with the ideas,

the 27th ult. in to declare the

ention of his

ing the com-

ade of the coast of France would be, to the United States, as unimportant, as would be a blockade of the coast of the Caspian sea."

And so far has the French emperor been from relaxing, in whole or in part, these odious regulations as to us, in consequence of our submitting to give up our English trade, that they have been made a subject of special instructions, to the minister who has been sent to the court of France. Mr Monroe, in his letter of instructions to Mr. Barlow of July 26, 1811, says: "Your early and particular attention will be drawn to the great subject of the commercial relation which is to subsist, in future, between the United States and France. The President expects that the commerce of the United States will be placed, in the ports of France, on such a footing as to afford it a fair market; and to the industry and enterprise of their citizens, a reasonable encouragement. An arrangement to this effect was looked for, immediately after the revocation of the decrees, but it appears from the documents, in this department, that that was not the case; on the contrary that our commerce has been subjected to the greatest discouragement, or rather, to the most oppressive restraints; that the vessels, which carried coffee, sugar, &c. though sailing directly from the United States to a French port, were held in a state of sequestration, on the principle, that the trade was prohibited, and that the importation of these articles was not only unlawful, but criminal; that even the vessels, which carried the unquestionable productions of the United States, were exposed to great and expensive delays, tedious investigations, in unusual forms, and to exorbitant duties. In short that the ordinary usages of commerce between friendly nations were abandoned."

Again Mr. Monroe, in the same letter, says: "If the ports of France, and her allies are not opened to the commerce of the United States, on a liberal scale and on fair conditions, of what avail to them, it may be asked,

will be the revocation of the British orders in council? In contending for the revocation of these orders, so far as it was an object of interest, the United States had in view, a trade to the continent. It was a fair, legitimate object and worth contending for, while France encouraged it. But if she shuts her ports on our commerce, or burdens it with heavy duties, that motive is at an end." He again says: "You will see the injustice and endeavour to prevent the necessity of bringing in return for American cargoes, sold in France, an equal amount in the produce, or manufactures of that country. No such obligation is imposed on French merchants, trading to the United States. They enjoy the liberty of selling their cargoes for cash, and taking back what they please from this country, in return. It is indispensable, that the trade be free, that all American citizens engaged in it be placed on the same footing, and, with this view, that the system of carrying it on, by licenses, granted by French agents be immediately annulled."

The despatches from Mr. Barlow, by the Hornet, most clearly show that the expectations of our government have not only not been realized, but that even the promises obtained, by our minister are of a very unsatisfactory nature. Indeed while Bonaparte is sending armies to the north of Europe, to take possession of the ports on the Baltick, and by his fast sailing squadrons, is burning American vessels on the Atlantick, all expectations of a free trade from France, must be worse than vain.

Notwithstanding the violence of the belligerents, were the restrictions of our own government removed, the commerce of the United States might be extensive and profitable. It is well known that from the gallantry of our seamen, if merchant vessels were allowed to arm and associate for self defence, they would be able to repel many unlawful aggressions.
The danger of capture would be diminished, and in relation to one of the belligerents at least, the risk, under such circumstances, would soon be measured by ensurance.

The discussions of our government, in relation to the British orders in council, give a currency to the opinion that they exist, without any modification according to the extent of the first principles, on which they were issued. And the French minister, in his last communication, on this subject made to the Conservative Senate, on the 10th of March last, speaks of the blockade of the 10th of May 1806 "as annihilating the rights of all maritime states and putting under interdiction whole coasts and empires;" and of the orders in council of 1807, as though still subsisting, and that according to their principles all vessels were compelled "to pay a tribute to England and all cargoes a tariff to her customs." What the real extent and principle of the blockade of May 1806 were, have already been explained. With respect to the British orders of 1807, the truth is, that by a new order issued on the 30th of April 1809, they were revoked or modified, and the obnoxious transit duty called by the French minister "tribute and tariff" was done away. The new order of April 1809, which is now the subject of complaint is limited to "all the ports and places as far north as the river Ems, inclusively, under the government styling itself the kingdom of Holland, and all ports and places under the government of France, together with the colonies, plantations and settlements in the possession of those governments respectively, and all ports and places in the northern parts of Italy, to be reckoned from the ports of Orbivello and Pesaro, inclusively."

The effect then of the British orders of blockade now in force, is to deprive us of the commerce of France, Holland and a part of Italy. And they leave open to us the commerce of all the rest of the world. What that is, some estimate may be formed by recurrence to the subjoined table, which exhibits the state of our commerce during 1806 and 1807—the two last years antecedent to the operation of our restrictive system. By that table it appears that the value of the exports of our domestick products to France, Holland, and Italy, was, during those two years,* at an average only of about six and a half million of dollars.—Whereas the average of our domestick exports to all other parts of the world, and which are now left free to us notwithstanding the effect of the British orders in council, exceed thirty eight millions! So extensive a commerce it is proposed to surrender for the restricted trade the French emperor will allow. A trade burdened by impositions, or harassed by vexations, from French domination, and French Douaniers, or custom house officers, in almost every port of continental Europe.

As in the scale of commercial advantages France has little to offer, in return, for the many obvious hazards, which according to the wish of her Emperour, the United States are about to incur; so, in the moral estimate of national prospects, there is little character to gain, or consolation to expect in the dark scene of things, on which we are entering.

A nation, like the United States, happy in its great local relations; removed from the bloody theatre of Europe; with a maritime border, opening vast fields for enterprise;—with territorial possessions, exceeding every real want;—its fire-

* Value of articles of domestick produce, exported to all the world.

	In 1806	In 1807
Whole amount,	$41,253,727	$48,699,592
To France	3,226,698	2,716,141
To Holland, now part of France	3,609,964	3,098,234
To Italy	185,346	250,257
	<hr/> 7,022,008	<hr/> 6,064,632
To England and dependencies	19,179,981	27,915,077
To all other parts of the world	14,051,740	14,719,883
	<hr/> 34,231,721	<hr/> 42,634,960

system. By that the value of the stick products to Italy, was, during an average only of million of dollars.— of our domestick arts of the world, fit free to us not of the British ord thirty eight mil- a commerce it is for the restricted perour will allow. impositions, or haom French domi uaniers, or custom ost every port of ommercial advan- e to offer, in reous hazards, which of her Emperour, about to incur; nate of national ttle character to xpect in the dark ch we are enterited States, hap- lations; removed of Europe; with ne vast fields for rial possessions, want;—its fire-stick produce, ex-

In 1807

Whole amount,
$48,699,592

2,716,141

3,098,234
250,257

6,064,632

27,915,077

14,719,883

42,634,960

sides safe;—its altars undefiled;—from invasion nothing to fear;—from acquisition nothing to hope;—how shall such a nation look to Heaven for its smiles, while throwing away, as though they were worthless, all the blessings and joys, which peace and such a distinguished lot, include? With what prayers can it address the Most High, when it prepares to pour forth its youthful rage; upon a neighbouring people; from whose strength, it has nothing to dread, from whose devastation it has nothing to gain?

If our ills were of a nature that war would remedy; if war would compensate any of our losses; or remove any of our complaints, there might be some alleviation of the suffering in the charm of the prospect. But how will war upon the land protect commerce upon the ocean? What balm has Canada for wounded honour? How are our mariners benefited by a war which exposes those who are free, without promising release to those who are impressed?

But it is said that war is demanded by honour. Is national honour a principle which thirsts after vengeance, and is appeased only by blood; which, trampling on the hopes of man, and spurning the law of God, untaught by what is past and careless of what is to come, precipitates itself into any folly or madness to gratify a selfish vanity or to satiate some unhallowed rage? If honour demands a war with England, what opiate lulls that honour to sleep over the wrongs done us by France? On land, robberies, seizures, imprisonments by French authority; at sea, pillage, sinkings, burnings under French orders. These are notorious. Are they unfelt because they are French? Is any alleviation to be found in the correspondence and humiliations of the present minister plenipotentiary of the United States at the French court? In his communications to our government, as before the publick, where is the cause for now selecting France, as the friend of our country and England as the enemy?

If no illusions of personal feeling, and no solicitude for elevation of place, should be permitted to misguide the publick councils; if it is, indeed, honourable for the true statesman to consult the publick welfare, to provide, in truth, for the publick defence, and impose no yoke of bondage; with full knowledge of the wrongs inflicted by the French, ought the government of this country to aid the French cause by engaging in war against the enemy of France? To supply the waste of such a war and to meet the appropriations of millions extraordinary, for the war expenditures, must our fellow citizens, throughout the union, be doomed to sustain the burden of war taxes, in various forms of direct and indirect imposition? For official information, respecting the millions deemed requisite for charges of the war; for like information, respecting the nature and amount of taxes, deemed requisite for drawing those millions from the community, it is here sufficient to refer to estimates and reports made by the secretary of the treasury and the committee of ways and means, and to the body of resolutions, passed in March last, in the house of representatives.

It would be some relief to our anxiety, if amends were likely to be made, for the weakness and wildness of the project, by the prudence of the preparation. But in no aspect of this anomalous affair can we trace the great and distinctive properties of wisdom. There is seen a headlong rushing into difficulties, with little calculation about the means and little concern about the consequences. With a navy comparatively nominal, we are about to enter into the lists against the greatest marine on the globe. With a commerce, unprotected and spread over every ocean, we propose to make profit by privateering, and for this endanger the wealth, of which we are honest proprietors. An invasion is threatened of the colonies of a power, which, without putting a new ship into commission, or taking another soldier into pay, can spread alarm or desolation along the extensive range of our seaboard. The resources of our country, in their natural state, great beyond our wants, or our hopes are impaired by the effect of artificial restraints. Before adequate fortifications are prepared for domestic defence, before men, or money are provided for a war of attack why hasten into the midst of that awful contest, which is laying waste Europe? It cannot be concealed, that to engage in the present war against England is to place ourselves on the side of France; and exposes us to the vassalage of states, serving under the banners of the French Emperour.

The undersigned cannot refrain from asking what are the United States to gain by this war? Will the gratification of some privateersmen compensate the nation for that sweep of our legitimate commerce by the extended marine of our enemy, which this desperate act invites? Will Canada compensate the middle states, for New York; or the western states for New Orleans? Let us not be deceived. A war of invasion may invite a retort of invasion. When we visit the peaceable, and, as to us, innocent colonies of Great Britain with the horrors of war can we be assured that our own coast will not be visited with like horrors?

At a crisis of the world such as the present, and under impressions such as these, the undersigned could not consider the war into which the U. States have, in secret, been precipitated, as necessary, or required by any moral duty, or any political expediency

George Sullivan, Martin Chittenden, Abijah Bigelow, Elijah Brigham, William Ely, Josiah Quincy,
William Reed, Saml. Taggart,
Laban Wheaton, Leonard White,
Richard Jackson, jun. Elisha R. Potter, Ephah's Champion, Jno. Davenport, jr.
Lyman Law, Jona. O. Moseley, Timo. Pitkin, jun. Lewis B. Sturges,

Benjamin Tallmadge, H. Bleecker, James Emott, Asa Fitch,
Thos. R. Gold, James Milnor,
H. M. Ridgely, C. Goldsborough,
Philip B. Key, Philip Stuart,
John Baker, Jas. Breckenridge,
Jos. Lewis, jun. Thos. Wilson,
A. M. Bryde, Jos. Pearson.

NOTE A.

Quantity of particular articles, the produce of the United States, exported from 1800 to 1811, viz.

COTTON.

	To all parts of the world. lbs.	To France. lbs.	To England lbs.
1800	17,789,803	none	16,179,513
1801	20,911,201	844,728	18,953,065
1802	27,501,075	1,907,849	23,473,925
1803	41,105,623	3,821,840	27,757,307
1804	38,118,041	5,946,848	25,770,748
1805	40,383,491	4,504,329	32,571,071
1806	37,491,282	7,082,118	24,256,457
1807	66,612,737	6,114,358	53,180,211
1808	12,064,346	2,087,450	7,992,593
1809*	53,210,225	none direct	13,365,967
1010†	93,874,201	do.	36,171,915
1811‡	63,186	do.	46,872,452

RICE.

	Tierces	Tierces	Tierces
1800	112,056	none	77,547
1801	94,866	2,724	65,022

* In 1809, in consequence of the embargo and non-intercourse act, 4 millions of pounds of Cotton were shipped for Madeira, 10 and a half millions to the Floridas, 6 millions to Fayal and other Azores, 1 million and three quarters to Portugal, and 10 millions to Sweden.

† 1810, about 4 millions of pounds of Cotton were shipped for Spain, 3 millions for Portugal, 3 millions for Madeira, 10 millions for Floridas, 2 millions for Europe generally, 4 millions for Fayal and the Azores, 14 millions for Denmark and Norway, and 5 millions for Sweden.

‡ In 1811, 9 millions of pounds of Cotton, were shipped for Russia.

Seecker,
Fitch,
Milnor,
Wadsworth,
Stuart,
Breckenridge,
Wilson,
Pearson.
... the pro-
... exported
 To England
lbs.
 16,179,513
 18,933,065
 23,473,925
 27,757,307
 25,770,748
 32,371,071
 24,256,457
 53,180,211
 7,992,593
 13,365,967
 36,171,915
 46,872,452

	To all parts of the world	To France	To England	To all parts of the world	To France	To England
1802	79,822	7,186	37,393	810,008	1,174	258,513
1803	81,838	3,116	33,200	777,512	none	233,176
1804	78,385	6,014	249,75	782,724	none	308,048
1805	56,830	1,601	24,737	1,249,819	none	619,908
1806	102,627	3,392	39,298	263,213	none	70,184
1807	93,692	3,006	37,417	846,247	none	230,822
1808	9,228	none direct	4,298	798,431	none	192,477
1809	116,907	do	32,138	1,445,012	2,964	275,534
1810	131,341	do	31,118
1811	119,356	do	40,045

TOBACCO.

	Hhds	Hhds	Hhds
1800	78,680	143	37,798
1801	103,758	5,006	55,256
1802	77,721	16,216	29,938
1803	86,291	9,815	47,829
1804	83,343	14,623	24,700
1805	71,452	12,135	18,169
1806	83,186	9,182	26,272
1807	62,232	2,876	23,047
1808	9,576	566	2,526
1809	53,921	none direct	8,965
1810	84,134	do	24,067
1811	35,828	569	20,342

FISH, Dried or Smoked.

	Quintals	Quintals	Quintals
1800	392,727	none	141,420
1801	410,948	1,687	111,030
1802	440,929	27,067	92,679
1803	461,870	3,491	71,795
1804	567,828	3,765	76,822
1805	514,549	73,004	55,676
1806	537,457	19,347	66,377
1807	473,924	87,654	55,242
1808	155,808	16,144	26,998
1809	345,648	none	66,566
1810	280,804	2,150	55,456
1811	216,387	28,622	33,243

PICKLED FISH.

None exported to European France.

FLOWER.

	Bbbs.	Bbbs.	Bbbs.
1800	653,052	none	365,739
1801	1,102,444	none	758,023
1802	1,156,248	14,628	484,886
1803	1,311,853	18,045	502,006

NAVAL STORES—TAR.

	Bbbs	Bbbs	Bbbs
1800	59,410	none	58,798
1801	67,487	none	62,632
1802	37,497	797	21,330
1803	78,989	none	75,395
1804	58,181	do	45,210
1805	72,745	do	59,439
1806	62,723	do	50,663
1807	59,282	do	51,232
1808	18,764	do	17,700
1809	128,090	do	32,072
1810	87,310	do	50,021
1811	149,796	do	123,034

TURPENTINE.

	Bbbs	Bbbs
1800	33,129	none
1801	35,413	do
1802	38,764	do
1803	61,178	do
1804	77,825	do
1805	95,640	do
1806	74,731	do
1807	53,451	do
1808	17,061	do
1809	77,398	do
1810	62,912	do
1811	100,242	do

LUMBER.

Of the vast quantities of Lumber exported from 1800 to 1811, only a few Staves and Heading went to France, as follows, viz.

Thousands of Staves and Heading.

1801	6,349
1803	357
1804	321
1805	466
1806	716
1807	614
1808	105

of the embargo ons of pounds of ra, 10 and a half lions to Fayal
 l three quarters
 Sweden.
 ounds of Cotton
 ons for Portu-
 millions for Flo-
 nerally, 4 mil-
 14 millions for 5 millions for
 ounds of Cotton,

THE subscribers to the foregoing address having referred to the report of the secretary of the treasury, for "official information respecting the millions deemed requisite for charges of the war; and to estimates and reports made by the secretary of the treasury and the committee of ways and means, and to the body of resolutions passed in March last in the house of representatives, for like information respecting the nature and amount of taxes deemed requisite for drawing those millions from the community," the editor has thought proper to subjoin the following list of bills reported to the house of representatives, by the committee of ways and means, on the 26th of June 1812. These bills for taxing the people to an amount altogether unexampled and unknown in this country, are drawn in strict conformity to the estimates, reports, and resolutions above referred to; but instead of being immediately passed into laws, they were, upon a motion of Mr. Roberts of Pennsylvania, ordered to lie on the table, and the further consideration of them was afterwards postponed on the motion of the same gentleman, till the first Monday in November next, which will be after the election of a President and Vice President.

A motion to print the bills was rejected by a large majority. It is said that the friends of Mr. Madison's reelection in congress from Pennsylvania concurred in the opinion that it would be hazardous to let the people feel the weight of these enormous and unexampled taxes before the choice of electors. The passing of the bills was therefore postponed, and an early session of congress ordered, so that as soon as the election is over they are to be taken up and the taxes laid without delay. In the mean time a law has been passed for issuing Treasury Notes, and increasing the national debt by borrowing money, which, it is hoped, will supply the wants of the government till after the election.

The following is a list of the bills for laying the taxes which are to support Mr. Madison and the war.

A bill to lay and collect a direct tax within the United States. [Land Tax.]

A bill for the assessment and collection of direct taxes and internal duties.

A bill imposing additional duties on the tonnage of ships and vessels.

A bill to retain 25 per centum on the drawbacks allowed by law.

A bill laying a duty on imported salt.

A bill to establish the office of commissioner of the Revenue.

A bill to lay duties on licenses to retailers of wines, spirituous liquors, and foreign merchandisc.

A bill to lay duties on carriages for the conveyance of persons.

A bill to lay duties on licenses to distillers of spirituous liquors. [Whisky Tax.]

A bill laying duties on sales at auction of foreign merchandisc, and of ships or vessels.

A bill laying duties on sugar refined within the United States.

A bill laying duties on bank notes and on notes of hand, and on foreign bills of exchange of a certain description. [Stamp Tax.]

A bill making further provision for the collection of internal duties,